

Teaching Tolerance Seeks Curriculum Designer

Teaching Tolerance, an award-winning anti-bias education project, is seeking a curriculum designer to strengthen its editorial team.

Teaching Tolerance magazine reaches over 400,000 educators all across America. Our website has close to one million visitors annually. Our curriculum kits are in use in tens of thousands of schools.

A project of the Southern Poverty Law Center (which is known internationally for its legal actions against hate groups), Teaching Tolerance is a leading voice for social justice and multiculturalism in K-12 education.

Today, we're more focused than ever on creating lesson plans that teachers can really use—in an environment of high-stakes testing and scripted curricula—to introduce their students to anti-bias topics.

We are looking for a curriculum designer who can create short, easy-to-implement lesson plans that are standards-based, and age- appropriate. Candidates should have a passion for social justice and experience designing curriculum for the K-12 classroom across academic subject areas and grade levels. Our ideal candidate understands critical literacy and has prior classroom experience.

Our teaching materials have won two Oscars, an Emmy and more than 20 honors from the Association of Educational Publishers, including two Golden Lamp Awards, the industry's highest honor.

The Southern Poverty Law Center is an equal opportunity employer. We welcome applications from people of color, lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgendered people, people with disabilities and women. The Center does not discriminate on the basis of gender, disability, age, marital status, status with regard to public assistance, religion, national origin, sexual orientation, race or ethnicity. Relocation to Montgomery, Ala., is required.

Send your cover letter, resume, and three samples of lessons or unit plans to: Human Resources, Southern Poverty Law Center, 400 Washington Ave., Montgomery, AL 36104. Electronic applications may be sent to humanresources@splcenter.org No phone calls, please.