

The Journal Committed to Social Change on Race and Ethnicity (JCSCORE) is an interdisciplinary, peer-reviewed journal published by the National Conference on Race and Ethnicity (NCORE).

The JCSCORE is an interdisciplinary and peer-reviewed journal committed to promote an exchange of ideas that can transform lives, enhance learning, and improve human relations in higher education.

The journal explores and examines interaction from interdisciplinary perspectives and reports on the status, needs, and direction of human relations studies affected by race, ethnicity and sovereignty in higher education policy, practice, and theory. As a journal of NCORE, the editors welcome work that reflects the complexities of intersectionality of identities as well as creative forms of scholarly work. As an interdisciplinary and peer-reviewed journal, we invite you to submit scholarship that transcends disciplinary boundaries including research articles and monographs, as well as creative papers that pursue innovative formats of scholarly work and approaches including narrative, poetry, and digital media.
